Image: shutterstock We humans instinctively know that we are just tiny flashes of life in a much bigger arc of existence. Our careers, families and our own bodies appear and disappear in just a few decades — just a blink of an eye compared to the history of our species. For thousands of years, humans have roamed most of planet Earth, building agricultural resources, domesticating animals, building basic tools and, of course, gathering in both small villages and massive metropolitan areas. In this quiz, what do you really think you know about ancient history? From the birthplace of humanity to the first towns and cities, our civilizations are nothing new. Cities have been built, destroyed, and rebuilt, often dozens or hundreds of times since human beings populated areas suited for farming and livestock production. What do you know about the earliest successful settlements? Primitive humans relied on caves and basic structures for shelter. Some mastered things like the wheel — others somehow managed to build amazing buildings without ever realizing the wheel's potential. From the Stone Age to the Iron Age, what do you know about humankind's advances in history? The ancient Greeks, Romans and Egyptians wielded immense power in their lands. Kings and queens dominated cultural affairs, dictated the lives of their subjects, and sometimes enslaved or even sacrificed their own people. Score: 0% Rank: Correct Answer: Score: 0% Rank: Correct Answer: This unit plan contains all of the PowerPoints, assignments, tests, primary documents and other information that I use for my unit on Ancient Civilizations. The PowerPoint notes have 100 slides of content for the Sumers, Babylonians, Egyptians, Hittites, Phoenicians, Assyrians and Persians. It also contains video links, primary source documents, assignments, and tests pertaining to the unit. The preview file gives you an idea of the content that is covered in this unit. All of this information is a crossword puzzle. This crossword review puzzle is perfect to use as a unit closure activity, quiz/test review, and acts as formative assessment as well. Answer Key is included! Please let me know what you think if you end up using this with your student. I usually project the crossword on the whiteboard and then have my students who finish a little early start filling in a few of the answers before we go over the questions as a class. Would work well in place of a study guide as well. Battle of the River Valley Civilizations is a group project that can be used as an activity or assessment after the course has covered Ancient Mesopotamia, Egypt, China and India. Groups use worksheets as prompt to create a presentation and study sheet for classmates for mid-term or exam while also re-evaluating and assessing one of the civilizations in more depth. To ensure everyone covers same materials (so students can compare and contrast civilizations on midterm) all groups must submit noteTypes:Page 3This is a test on the early people of Mesopotamia, perfect to use after teaching a unit on how early people hunted and gathered, farmed and herded, and began developing early civilizations (such as Jericho and Ur). The test is broken into sections of multiple choice, vocabulary fill-in-the-blank, draw and describe a ziggurat, short answer, and a T-chart on advantages and disadvantages of settling in one place to farm to reach different learning styles in the assessment. Includes full answer keyPage 4Thirty-six multiple choice questions, spanning 6 pages, all based on assessing fact vs. opinion, cause vs. effect and outlines. These questions can be used in any social studies curriculum. The repetitive nature of the questions, as well as the specific ordering of them, is meant to help students develop confidence answering multiple choice questions based on 3 specific skills: fact vs. opinion, cause vs. effect and outlines. This quiz is part of my global history skills series. Skill 1 = Maps (8 In order to continue enjoying our site, we ask that you confirm your identity as a human.
